

June 8, 2023

Dear Member of Congress:

We are writing to urge you to support S. 1838 / H.R. 3881, the Credit Card Competition Act. The bill was introduced by Senators Roger Marshall (R-KS), Dick Durbin (D-IL), J.D. Vance (R-OH), and Peter Welch (D-VT) in the Senate and Representatives Lance Gooden (R-TX), Zoe Lofgren (D-CA), Tom Tiffany (R-WI), and Jeff Van Drew (R-NJ) in the House. It will bring much needed competition into the United States credit card market, which has been dominated by only two players for far too long.

As members of the retail community and champions of the free market we typically do not support government intervention except in cases where a market is not functioning. That is the case with the credit card marketplace in the United States.

Today, Visa and Mastercard control over 83 percent of the U.S. credit card market. Unlike in the debit card market, they do not have to compete with any other service provider for merchant business. In fact, they bar their competitors from even having a shot at business with banks that issue their cards. This blocking of competition drives up prices for merchants and consumers, harms security and strangles innovation.

In fact, swipe fees for credit cards are higher in the United States than anywhere else in the industrialized world – more than seven times as high as Europe. In 2022 alone, U.S. merchants and consumers paid more than $160 billion in card fees.

And because credit card swipe fees are a percentage of the transaction, they are an inflation multiplier. Economists estimate that last year alone these fees cost the average American family more than $1000, and because of ongoing inflation, that number is likely even higher today.

The Credit Card Competition Act would bring much-needed relief to retailers and American consumers by simply requiring that Visa and Mastercard compete with other networks for both merchant and bank business.

A payments consulting firm estimates that introducing competitive networks will save U.S. consumers and merchants $11 billion annually.

As champions of free enterprise, we know competition leads to innovation. We've seen it in the debit market, where security innovations flourished when Visa and Mastercard were no longer allowed to be exclusive networks. When payment networks have to compete, they invest in new security technologies for their customers.

Finally, this legislation would introduce much-needed redundancy protection into the system. Currently, there are no backup networks on credit cards, so when there is an outage consumers cannot access their credit. By introducing routing competition, S. 4674 would ensure that consumers have access to their credit cards even if a network suffers an outage or is hacked.

Our undersigned companies urge you to bring competition to the U.S credit card marketplace and support U.S consumers and Main Street businesses by cosponsoring the Credit Card Competition Act.

Sincerely,

150 Quick Stop / Jake's Fresh Country Sausage
